The sites where credit card requests may be collected by card issuing organizations, other than their head offices or branches, will be determined jointly by the Turkish Association of Banks and the Turkish Association of Participation Banks in due consultation with the Agency.

In the case of failure in payment of the minimum amount within three months following the last payment date, and failure in payment of the said amount within one month after receipt of a notice by the card holder from the card issuing organization, or in the case of infliction of judicial penalties and sentences in respect of use of bank cards and credit cards, the relevant card issuing organization will cancel all credit cards given to that card holder, and may not issue and give new credit cards until full repayment and settlement of the outstanding debts.

Card issuing organizations are under obligation to establish and keep continuously open and operational a system for taking the required actions and measures for ensuring proper and safe use of cards and relating to the notices, requests, complaints and objections.

Card issuing organizations are obliged to supply adequate information to the card holder at the time of issuing a card, and if demanded, to submit the records of the effected transactions within a reasonable period of time appropriate for the nature of such transactions, up to a maximum period of thirty days. This period will be sixty days for the transactions effected abroad.

If the cards are usable only by using a code number, a cipher or any other identification method, the card issuing organizations are liable to take all actions and measures as required for keeping such information in strict confidence, and to prevent printing of the card number on the customer copy of the expenditure and crediting documents and on the correspondences relating thereto.

Card issuing organizations are obliged to take actions for delivery of bank cards and credit cards only to the principal card holder, and to ensure that bank cards and credit cards issued to the name of minor holders of the supplementary cards are also delivered personally to the principal card holder.

Credit Card Limits

Article 9: Card issuing organizations are under obligation to determine and apply a limit of use of cards as a result of an assessment to be carried on by them by taking into consideration the prohibitions inflicted on or the legal incompetence of, the economic and social status of, and the monthly or yearly average income of the persons who apply for a credit card, as well as the existing credit card limits previously allocated to these persons by the other card issuing organizations, and the results of a modeling or scoring system, and the “know-your-customer” principles, and the information to be provided pursuant to Article 29 hereof. However, card issuing organizations may not increase card limits unless otherwise demanded by the card holder. If and to the extent the expenditures made by a card holder exceed his card limit, the amount in excess may not be subject to any charge or interest other than the contractual interest for the period from the date of transaction to the date of actual payment.

The total limit of credit cards that may be granted by a card issuing organization to all credit cards of a natural person may not be in excess of twice of his average monthly net income for the first year, and in excess of four times thereof for the second year. objections. The organizations are liable to take all actions and measures in order to ensure quick transmission of complaints and objections of card and supplementary card holders to their relevant units.

Transactions effected by using a credit card may be objected through an application to the card issuing organization within ten days following the last payment date. The credit card holder is obliged to clearly state in his application to which items in the account statement she or he objects, together with reasons and grounds thereof. An account statement to which no objection is raised by the end of this period of time will become final. However, finalization of account statement does not prejudice to the rights of action arising out of the general law provisions.

Article 12: In the case of loss or theft of card or any of the information referred to in Article 16 hereof, the card holder will be held liable for the damages and losses caused by unlawful and unauthorized use of his card within twenty-four hours prior to a notice to be sent by him hereunder, subject to a limitation of one hundred and fifty New Turkish Liras. However, this limitation is not applicable in case of failure of the card holder in notification or in the event that the unlawful use of card is attributable to any gross negligence or malicious misconduct of the card holder.

The card issuing organization is under obligation to take out and maintain an insurance cover against liability of the card holder for the limit of one hundred and fifty New Turkish Liras as referred to the first paragraph hereof, upon demand of the card holder and subject to payment of the relevant insurance premiums and costs by the card holder. The procedures and principles with regard to insurance cover of cards and sharing of liability in connection therewith will be set down in a regulation to be issued by the Agency.

SIXTH PART

Form of Agreement, and General Transaction Conditions

Conditions of Agreement

Article 24: Relations between card issuing organizations and card holders will be governed by a written agreement to be printed with minimum twelve type size and in dark black letters in accordance with this Law and other applicable laws and regulations. A copy of this agreement will be delivered to the card holder and if any, to his guarantor. Card issuing organizations are obliged to give detailed information to the card holder about the use of card and the provisions of the agreement.

Form and minimum contents of agreements to be signed by the card issuing organizations with the card holders will be determined by the Board.

Minimum amount specified in the agreement cannot be less than twenty percent of the debt of the period. If the minimum payment amount stated on the account statement is not paid on or before the last payment date, the card holder cannot be held liable to pay any interest over the unpaid amount of debt, other than the delay interest specified clearly in the agreement.

For the transactions executed by the card holder, no payment may be requested in any form or under any name whatsoever such as interest, commission or expense, unless clearly incorporated and specified in the agreement, and no money may be set off from the card holder's account in relation therewith. The agreement may not contain any clause which prejudices to the rights and interests of the card holder and provides unilateral, unfair and unjust benefits to the card issuing organization.

It will be stated in the agreement that the guarantor cannot be deemed to have fallen in default unless and until the unpaid debts of the card holder are duly notified to the guarantor. With regard to the increase of the limit of use of card or the amendments proposed in the agreement clauses resulting in an increase in the guarantor's liability, the liability of the guarantor arising out of such additional or amended clauses may start only if and after a written consent of the guarantor is taken in relation therewith. The security on the use of credit cards is governed by and subject to the provisions of the Code of Obligations pertaining to simple and ordinary security and surety. The guarantor may not be demanded to pay the guaranteed debts unless and until all remedies are used for collection of the debts from the principal debtor.

If the card is continued to be used after the last payment date of the period of notification, all such amendments in the agreement will be considered and treated to be accepted by the card holder. In case of an increase in the interest rate, such increase may become effective only upon a thirty-days' prior notice to the card holder. The card holder will not be affected by interest rate increase if he ceases to use his credit card and pays the full amount of his outstanding debts within no later than sixty days after receipt of the notice relating to the interest rate increase.

The card holder is entitled to terminate the agreement and to have his card cancelled upon demand.

Interest Calculation

Article 26: All kinds of clauses allowing the accrual of interest over the total amount of debts or the balance of account of an accounting period, starting from a date prior to the account cutoff date when the account statement of that period is issued, will be null and void. The date of transaction will be taken as the starting date of interest accrual over the debts arising out of withdrawal of cash. The transactions to be considered as withdrawal of cash will be determined by the Board.

In case of partial payment of the debts of a period, the interest will be calculated over the balance of account. The balance of account will be subject to contractual interest rate in case of payment equal to or above minimum amount, or to delay interest rate in case of payment below minimum amount. Compound interest cannot be applied on the debts arising out of card use, also including the event of default.

The Turkish Central Bank is authorized to determine maximum contractual and delay interest rates and will publish and declare the determined rates once every 3 months.

The period between the account cutoff date and the last payment date cannot be less than ten days.
